The joint meeting of LSPA and SWEP will focus sustainable and green remediation. Two presenters, Jon Nash of NewStream and Jason Flattery, P.E. LEED of ERM will discuss efforts each of their respective companies are making towards meeting this goal.

Jon Nash of NewStreamH2O will discuss how a former Texas Instruments wastewater treatment facility has been 'recycled' and is embracing sustainability on a large scale. Jon will discuss how NewStream, regarded as a model industrial liquid recycling and treatment facility, enhanced operations with the installation of hundreds of solar panels, energy efficient lighting and more.

Jason Flattery will be presenting a quick introduction to the concepts of green vs. sustainable remediation followed by case studies from ERM's portfolio of recent projects which included elements of green remediation.

Please register and pay online at www.swep-ma.org by February 10 for this event. No shows will be billed. Refunds granted through February 9, 2011.
